[From the New York Home Journal.] TREMBLINGS OF A LOVE-LUTE.

BY KATE SEYMOUR WACLEAU.

- The billy bells ring underground,
  Their music small I hear,
  When globes of dew that shine, pearl round,
  Hang in the cowellp's ear;
  And all the summer blooms and sprays
  Are sheathed from the sun,
  And yet I feel, in many ways,
  Their living pulses run.
- The growning rose of summer-time
  Lies folded on its stem;
  Its bright urn holds no honey wine,
  Its brow no diadem;
  And yet my soul is inly thrilled,
  As if I stoodanear
  Some regal presence unrevealed—
  The queen of all the year.
- O rose, dear rose! the mist and dew Uprising from the lake. And sunshine giancing warmly through Have kissed the flowers awake; The orchard blooms are drepping balm, The tuilp's gorgeous cup, More slonder than a desert paim, Its chatice lifteth up.
- The birds are mated in the trees,
  The wan stars burn and pale,
  O rose come forth! Upen the breeze
  I near the nightingsle.
  Unfold the crimeon waves that lie
  In darkness, rosy dim,
  And swing thy fragrant censer high,
  O regal rose, for him!
- Thy hyacinths are pale with love
  And longing, queenly rose!
  Their sweet bolt ring responses low
  To evary wind that blows.
  And violets bending in the grass,
  Do hide their glowing eyes
  When those extraording voices pass,
  Like sire from paradise.
- We crowned our blushing queen of May, hong since, with clance and tune; But the merry world of yesterday is 'apaing into June; Thou art not here, we look in vain; O rose, arise, appear! Rosenne thine merrald throne, and reign The queen of all the year!

THE GROST-SENSE. -Dr. Holmes, "at the Breakfast Table," in the November "Atlantic," says concerning superstitions feelings at night:

"It is all very easy for you, middle-aged reader, sitting over this page in the broad day light, to call me by all manner of of asinine and ascrine unchristian names. because I had these fancies running through my head. I dont care much for your abuse. The question is not, what it is reasonable for a man to think about, but what he really does think about, in the dark and when he is alone and, his whole body seems but one great nerve of hearing, and he sees the phosphorescent flashes of his own eyeballs as they turn suddenly in the direction of the last strange noise—what he actually does think about, as he lies and recalls all the wild stories his head is full of, his fancy hinting the most alarming conjectures to account for the simplest fact about him, his common-sense laughing them to scorn the next minute, but his mind still returning to them, under one shape or another, until he gets very nervous and foolish, and remembers how pleasant it used to be to have his mother come and tuck him up and go and sit within call, so that she could hear him at any minute, if he got very much scared and wanted her. Old babies that we are!"

(How this goes home to one-a long while ago; and comes home to him today!) "Daylight will clear up all that lamp-

THE MYSTERY OF DEATH .- Dr. Holland thus eloquently writes upon the mystery

of mysteries: "The body is to die; so much is certain.
What lies beyond? No one who passes the charmed boundary comes back to tell. The imagination visits the realms of shadows-sent out from some window of the soul over life's restless waters, but wings its way wearily back with an olive leaf in its beak as a token of emerging life beyond the closely bending horizon. The great sun comes and goes in heaven, yet breathes no secret of the ethereal wilderness. The crescent moon cleaves her nightly passage across the upper deep, but tosses overboard no message and displays no signals. The senti. nel stars challange each other as they walk their nightly rounds, but we catch no syllable of their countersign which gives passage to the heavenly camp. Shut in! Shut in! Between this and the other life there is a great gulf fixed, across which neither eye nor foot can travel. The gentle friend whose eyes we closed in their last sleep long years ago, died with rapture in her wonder stricken eyes, a smile of ineffable joy upon her lips; and hands folded over a triumphant heart; but her lips were past speech, and intimated nothing of the vision that enthralled her."

DISGUSTING CONCEIT .- The Paragraph below we find going the rounds, credited to the Louisville journal. Whatever its source, no man, it seem to us, but an over-amorous jidiot could have written such a thing, which, stupid as nauseating, is nearly enough to disgust any woman of sensibility or delicacy with all mankind, because so silly a coxcomb is, unfortunately, included in the sex:

To the pretty girl sending us, be-tween now and the 1st of January, the handsomest pair of kid gloves (we wear No. Te) a kiss upon the forehead; to the one sending the best hemmed handkerchief (hemmed with her own hand) a kiss upon the cheek; and to the one sending the most beautiful slippers (our feet are rather small and delicate, dear girls,) a kiss upon the lips."

A GREAT AUTHOR'S OPINION OF THE WORLD .- Voltaire, the wittiest and perhaps the most idolized of writers, gives an opinion of life and the world that thousands who have breathed and suffered will with aching minds indorse: "The world abounds with wonders, and also with victims. In man is more wretchedness than in all other animals put to-gether. Man loves life, yet he knows he must die; spends his existence in diffus ing the miseries he has suffered-outting the throats of his fellow-creatures for pay—cheating and being cheated. The bulk of mankind are nothing more than a crowd of wretches, equally criminal equally unfortunate. I wish I had never been born.'

BRAUTIFUL!-As winds the ivy around the tree, as to the crag the moss patch roots, so clings my constant soul to thee! my own, my beautiful—my boots!

"Gentleman," said a tavern keeper to his gnests, at midnight, "I don't know whether you have talked enough or not, but as for myself I am going to shut up."

HUMOR AND SENTIMENT.

"Do you know who built this bridge? said a person to Hook. "No," replied Hook, "but if you go over you'll be tolled!"

Will you be a second," said a gen tleman, who proposed to fight a duel. "No, indeed, for you wouldn't stand a second yourself."

The poor tailor who tried to cure his wife's temper has given it up as a bad job. He found the experiment was not worth the salt."

AN EPIGRAM. "What's woman's proper sphere, my love?"
Asked John of pretty Jean.
"You give it up? "Tis thirty feet.
Or more—of crinoline."

An advertisement reads as follows: "Stolen, a watch worth ten guineas. If the thief will return it he shall be informed where he may steal one worth two of it, and no questions asked."

A gentleman in Ohio, who died recently, bequeathed to his wife a handsome sum, providing in his will that in case she married again it should be doubled.

Talleyrand, when asked by a lady famous for her beauty and stupidity how she should rid herself of some of her troublesome admirers, replied, "You have only to open your mouth, madam."

A young fellow, the son of an eminent dancing-master, applying to a friend as to what trade or profession it would be best for him to pursue, was answered "I think you cannot do better than follow the steps of your father.

In many trifles, man is just (or unjust) as contradictory as woman. For instance, he objects to see flies in his port wine, and yet the fastidious monster is not in the least enraged at the sight of the bee's wing!

"I didn't denounce you," said a saucy young fellow to an editor, "but only your subordinate; I merely made a fling at your staff.—"Well, sir," replied the editor, suiting the action to the word, "then my staff shall have a fling at you."

A writer of the last century quaintly observed that when the cannons of the princes began war, the cannons of the church were destroyed. "It was," said he, "first mitre that governed the world, and then nitre-first Saint Peter, and then saltpetre.

1 It is undoubtedly a duty to acquire riches, not for the condition which they make, but for the power they confer. The wisdom, however, properly to employ them demands even more earnest study and honest endeavor.-Simms.

Faith and will, are the two maternal birds which nourish courage and performance; the one gives us confidence in ourselves, the other enables us to secure the confidence of those whom we would conquer or control.

Let youth cherish sleep, the happiest of earthly boons, while yet it is at its command; for there cometh the day to all, when "neither the voice of the lute nor the birds" shall bring back the sweet slumbers that fell on their young eyes as unbidden as the dews.

The Bulletin lays down a number of rules of action in case of one's clothes catching fire, and concludes by recommending any lady who should unfortu-nately find herself enveloped in the flames of her burning garments, "keep as cool as possible."

"Mr. Captain," said a son of Erin, going on board a vessel in the port of Cork, "you looked so much like the mate that I took you to be the cook. Will you be after lending me the loan of your broadax to saw an empty barrel of flour in two, to make my cow a hog-pen?" A man was taken up for stealing some valuable fancy ducks, and after a description of them, the prisoner's attorney said, "Why, they can't be such a rare breed, for I have some of them in my own yard.—"Very likely," said the complainant; "I have lost a good many lately."

When Jones went to dinner the other day, he found one of his apprentices, in the kitchen quietly rolling up his sleeves. "What are you going to do?" said Jones. "Oh," responded the boy, "I am going to dive down into that pot, to see if I can find the meat that the soup was made from."

"How old did you say your sister ras?" "Twenty five."—"You must be mistaken. I was under the impression she was only twenty." "She wears hoop skirts, doesn't she?" "From appearances should say she did." "Well, then, twenty-five springs at least have passed over her head."

The best way to avoid being dis turbed by an unpleasant thing, said Dr. Spooner, is to resolve that it shall not disturb you; but should your nerves be sensitive and unable to stand the trial, hasten by the annoyance and don't see it. A stinging remark loses all its point when we are not conscious that we are

Brighton hotel, "I'll get you a place in London as a first rate packer."—"Packer, sir!" said the astonished waiter, with the white cloth under his arm, blightly agi-tated, "I never learned to pack." "All the better," replied Tom; it's a natural gift: for see how you have packed my bottle of wine in a piut decanter!"

"Going to leave, Mary?"—"Yes, mum; I find I am very discontented."—
"If there is anything I can do to make you more comfortable, let me know." "No, mum, it's impossible. You can't alter your figger to my figger, no mor'n I can.
Your dresses won't fit me, and I can't appear on Sundays as I used at my last place, where missus' clothes fitted' xactly.
xactly."

Torturing a man to make him con-fess is a trial not of guilt, but of nervenot of innocence, but of endurance; it compels the weak to affirm what is false, and determines the strong to deny what is true; it converts the criminal into the witness, the judge into the executioner, and makes a direr punishment than would follow conviction.

In youth we look upon life through the small end of the telescope; in old age, through the broad. They are the same objects, and yet we wonder that what once appeared so large should now seem so very small- Alas! that happy time, when all things were sweet as con-"ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE."—The life of a miser is a bad drama, the only point of which is in the end. All the effects never come again—nor shall we care much if it never does. BUSINESS CARDS
